SUPPER TALK

on Monday, 4th February 2019

At 7.30 for 8.00pm in the McKenna Room Christ Church

Dr Janina Ramirez

will talk about

The private lives of the Anglo-Saxon saints – they surround us in street names, school dedications and in our ancient cathedrals, but is there still a place for the Anglo-Saxon saints today?

Dr Janina Ramirez is a presenter, lecturer and researcher. Since completing a PhD at the prestigious Centre for Medieval Studies in York, she has lectured across a broad range of subjects (art, archaeology, history, literature and language). She is now Course Director for the Undergraduate Certificate in History of Art in the Department for Continuing Education at the University of Oxford. Janina has published widely on medieval art and literature, while continuing to teach and research across a broad chronological sweep, covering everything from the sculptures of antiquity to post-modern architecture. In addition, she has written and presented numerous documentaries for the BBC, including: ‘Saints & Sinners: Britain’s Millennium of Monasteries’, ‘The Search for the Lost Manuscript Julian of Norwich’ and, more recently, she appeared with historian Dan Snow in the intriguing drama-documentary: ‘1066 A Year to Conquer England.’

Sherry or soft drinks will be offered prior to a two course supper with wine and coffee.
